UK Brexit update

HSBC's Elizabeth Martins says a year into the post-EU era UK exports are weak and the labour markets are experiencing acute shortages. The pandemic clouds the picture and it is too soon to draw firm conclusions on how much is due to Brexit.

Remote impact

As remote working looks to become a post-pandemic norm for many, there are short-term downside risks to economic growth but longer-term benefits that could be substantial, say HSBC's James Pomeroy and Elizabeth Martins.

Europe COVID-19 tracker

Omicron is still rife in Europe but with hospital admissions past their peak, governments are preparing to ease restrictions. Economic expectations remain upbeat for spring, although high inflation could potentially spoil the party, says HSBC's Christian Fuertjes.

Asia COVID-19 & Vaccine Tracker

Daily infections have spiked in Singapore, Japan and South Korea but have started to ease in the Philippines and Australia. And, as HSBC economists discuss, movement during the Lunar New Year makes containing the virus tricky for places such as South Korea, Vietnam and China.

The Macro Viewpoint

Fed ready for action, price controls revisited, the nuclear option

In the 250th edition of the podcast, we consider the outlook for US monetary policy, look at whether price controls could help douse inflation and assess the role nuclear energy could play in the transition to a net zero carbon economy.
